

ALL JOIN HANDS

Ruth and Naomi

(Judy MacKenzie-Dunn)

My brothers and my sisters
Live the whole world over
But I don't know all their names
We are strangers to each other
Different clothes, different colors
Different stories, different songs
But the world is home to all of us
And all of us belong

Here's Ruth and Naomi
Someone's wife, someone's mother
When their troubles laid them low
They brought comfort to each other
Different ways, different cultures
Different ages, different lands
But they learned to live together
And became the best of friends

*All join hands, all join hands
Across the room, across the lands
All join hands, all join hands
Across the whole wide world, all join hands*

My brothers and my sisters
Live the whole world over
And no matter where you're from
We can care for one another
We are different but the same
Like the snowflakes in the sky
We are children of our Father God
And precious in his eyes

All join hands, all join hands...

Come on now, everybody
Across the sea and across the lands
Come on every boy, every girl, in the world
Come on and let's join hands

All join hands, all join hands...

Come on now, everybody
Across the sea and across the lands
Come on every boy, every girl, in the world
Come on and let's join hands
