

RED ROPE

Rahab and the Spies

(Ashley Slater & Kristian Booth)

I remember long ago
A story that my father told
About a girl
Her name was Rahab

In the city of Jericho
Joshua's spies they had to go
And search the town
And not be found

Rahab knew she had to lie
For future safety of her and the spies
Gave them time and helped to hide
Taking a risk to be their ally

*Red rope hanging from the window
She will always let you in though
'Cos she saw you needed help
When you couldn't help yourself
Red rope hanging from the window
When they returned she'd be safe though
She was glad to help
Being generous to others*

When the soldiers came to find
The two spies that she'd tried to hide
Upon the roof
Under stalks and leaves

When the spies left Jericho they said
Hang red rope in the window
On their return
Her family wouldn't burn

All this helps us to believe
There's always more than we can see
To take a chance if it feels right
Brave the dark to see the light
Red rope hanging from the window...

When the city was besieged
She was saved 'cos she believed
She took them in in time of need
She had the strength to intervene

Red rope hanging from the window...
